Guidebook for Great Communities: Myths and Facts

Fact 1
The Guidebook helps to maintain and enhance a community's unique traits. We work with community members – the experts on their respective communities – through an inclusive engagement process called "local area planning". Additional policy, such as Heritage Guideline Area or Special Policy Area may also be applied during this process to ensure a community's unique sense of place is honoured.

Fact 3
The Guidebook does not prevent single detached homes from being built or retained. The Guidebook directs multi-family growth to where growth is already happening. Our MDP already promotes diverse low density homes including semi-detached, cottage and rowhouses where appropriate. These are typically three storeys or less.

Fact 5
The Guidebook supports single-detached homes as an option in every community in Calgary outside the centre city. We expect and plan for this housing option to continue to be a popular choice of home for citizens.

Fact 7
The Guidebook encourages all mobility options so people can choose how they want to travel around the city and in their communities. Motor vehicles will always be a normal part of travelling around our communities and Calgary. Supporting more people living closer to more mobility options, means citizens won't have to rely on just one way of travel. That's important for all Calgarians.

Fact 9
The Guidebook helps protect and enhance heritage assets in Calgary's communities through Heritage Resource Policies and the Heritage Guideline Area Tool for Communities. These are the most progressive tools YYC has ever had!

Fact 11
The Guidebook ensures that as our communities grow and change, there are best practice amenity and landscaping policies to keep our communities beautiful and vibrant, and to ensure that there are places for people to gather, socialize, play and relax.

Myth 1
The Guidebook will create homogenous communities. The Guidebook wants all communities look and feel the same way. The Guidebook will take away community identity.

Myth 2
With the Guidebook in place, development will become haphazard and go everywhere.

Myth 3
The Guidebook promotes multi-unit homes and will stop development of housing, like single-detached homes. The Guidebook places multi-family housing everywhere.

Myth 4
Once approved, the Guidebook will automatically allow for certain types of buildings without a review process.

Myth 5
Single-detached homes will no longer be built under the new Guidebook.

Myth 6
The Guidebook will force existing communities to change.

Myth 7
The Guidebook is a declaration of war on cars.

Myth 8
The Guidebook will force communities to change their make-up by allowing for different types of development than what there is today.

Myth 9
The Guidebook is all about moving forward and forgetting about the past. It does not consider heritage as an important part of a community.

Myth 10
The Guidebook promotes densification.

Myth 11
The Guidebook will decrease green spaces and natural areas.

Myth 12
The Guidebook will be used to force change and dictate what communities should be.

Fact 2
The Guidebook together with a community local area plan will provide more certainty and predictability for redevelopment in communities than the current Area Redevelopment Plans or communities without a plan. The local area planning process is what we, together with the community, determine where growth should go in the right places.

Fact 3
Three storey homes are currently allowed through the Land Use Bylaw. The Guidebook is reflecting what already exists today.

Fact 4
FALSE: The Guidebook does not pre-approve zoning nor change the development process or rules for homes or any other building type. Current zoning will remain in place. Property owners wishing to redevelop or develop their property must go through the same planning application processes that are in place today. The same public notification and approval process that exists today for redevelopment will exist after the Guidebook is approved.

Fact 6
Communities in Calgary are always changing. They're changing right now. The Guidebook works with community residents through the local area planning process to establish a vision for community growth and change. It's how we can get ahead of that change and work with communities so they can help determine where best to focus that change.

Fact 8
The Guidebook encourages diverse housing, amenity, and employment options in all communities. This helps keep our local schools and shops full. We can grow older and not worry about moving away from our community. The local area plan will work with community to establish this detail at the community level.

Fact 10
The Guidebook, together with local area plans provides tools to plan resilient communities by encouraging diverse housing and mobility, and enhancing parks, natural areas and outdoor recreation places in communities. It is not about density everywhere. It's about making sure growth is encouraged where growth is wanted or already happening, such as our Main Streets, Primary Transit Network and our busier areas that offer more commercial, retail and employment opportunities.

Fact 12
The Guidebook is a tool to be used ONLY with the Local Area Plan. We use the Guidebook with citizens to talk about where growth and change makes most sense, how to protect heritage assets, how to support our businesses in our communities, and more. This enables Calgarians to shape the vision for their own community's future through the local area planning process.
