With recent changes to minimum parking requirements for both residential and commercial buildings, the City is creating significant parking issues. When adding density, DEVELOPERS need to provide parking for residents and users, rather than downloading that responsibility onto current homeowners. Residents moving into high density multi-residential developments need to be made aware that there is NO on street parking available for them unless these developments are in the downtown core, where they can access parking once businesses have closed.

Market permit pricing for high density residential developments would be appropriate in zone C, and possibly in those zones indicated as inner city, but ABSOLUTELY NOT in the suburbs.

Councillors-- please restrict this market permit system to the City Center. Thank you for your time.
