An aerial photograph showing a stark contrast between modern and old urban development. On the left, a modern, multi-story building with a white facade and blue-tinted windows stands prominently. To its right, a dense cluster of older, multi-story residential buildings with balconies and air conditioning units is visible. A thick red diagonal line runs from the top-left corner towards the bottom-right, crossing over the modern building. A black circular graphic element is positioned on the right side, overlapping the older buildings. Centered over the black circle is a black rectangular box containing white text.
