I would like to add my comment to say that the city should not allow any development for higher density than single family homes, such as this application. The area is already has heavy traffic and street parking is extremely difficult without adding any extra occupants/vehicles to the area. Narrow roads in the area don't allow for much room and it is very crowded as is. Garbage/recycling collection will also be difficult as every unit will need to have it's own black, green and blue bins in an alleyway or roadways that is, once again, already crowded. Aside from that issue, the neighborhood was originally planned as a community of single family homes to support young people and their families growing up with lots of room for parks and schools. The character of the area would be forever changed for the negative if we start filling in with high density housing. There are many new areas, and areas being redeveloped that could benefit from this type of higher density housing, but Prestwick is not one of them.
