

Non-Government Investment

Council Direction: 8. Investigate placement, ownership, and funding approaches to partner with non-government sectors as a means to increase value-for-dollar and accessibility;

Administration has researched multiple municipalities, and examined current internal corporate practices to understand best practices and potential processes and opportunities that could be adopted to enhance non-government investment opportunities. Key findings include:

- Density bonussing is used to provide Public Art but there is no apparent standard or best practice in Canada or the United States.
 - Larger municipalities like Los Angeles, Vancouver and Toronto use both mandatory and optional participation through development policy.
- There are several areas within The City of Calgary that are dedicated to working with external, non-government partners on sponsorships and partnerships that can be leveraged.

There are several areas within The City of Calgary that are dedicated to working with external, non-government partners on sponsorships and partnerships that can be leveraged. The Public Art team has been working cross corporately with areas such as Planning & Development to understand what current process and supports are in place and develop a process to encourage private investment in public art.

Next steps

Ongoing: Work with internal partners to continue to leverage partnership opportunities.

Q2 2019: Meet with non-government partners regarding investing in public art and develop a tool kit for assistance and support.

Q3 2019: Integrate Public Art into the internal development review process.

Q1 2020: Report back on these activities to Council.
